I have sgs which is running eclair rom for my cellphone i used cwm and everything went fine but i want to flash my home edition phone now it's like a little bit stuck i followed the the manual procedure for flashing cwm the nfs and everything goes fine but after the reboot when i try to unlock and install the cwm rom again it's stuck on the red screen of death my phone is samsung sgh-t500 so i have a 4.3.2 version with cwm 1.1 and everything went fine for cellphones but for this one thing i don't know if it's a mod or a update or what so anyone that would be kind to help me plz. Thank you! Where did you download the 2.2.1 archive and did you use the default settings? If you have Odin installed you'll need to make sure to tell it to 'Flash' the firmware. A lot of the tutorials assume you have a different firmware installed. If you have the wrong ROM for your phone you may find that Odin does not recognize it. If you don't have Odin installed, you can probably download the latest version from here <http://www.droid-life.com/2012/06/02/samsung-rom-manager-update-ver-2-2-1-1-released/> (try to select the TWRP option first) If you have the correct ROM and it doesn't boot, you may need to flash recovery first <http://forum.xda-developers.com/showthread.php?t=791205> . I think this is what is happening because most kernels don't like TWRP yet - so it needs to be flashed to recovery first. 2. set the device to download mode 3. then connect the phone to the computer (not data cable) with the usb cord firmly connected 4. turn the phone back on, red power light blinks, green light stays on. 5. on Odin, press Start + Select/Home to turn off Odin. and confirm you are turning off Odin by pressing Menu on the phone. 6. now restart phone and if windows show partition, select fat32 or NTFS and press Start. (choose FASTBOOT if your phone is also rooted)
